The Outlook in Russia.

Something of the confusion which has shrouded the political affairs of Russia since General Korniloff's abortive revolt is now beginning to clear away. Fortunately, for reasons which are obscure, but are probably concerned with the progressive decline in German man-power, the political confusion is not aggravated by the military pressure of the enemy. The advance from Riga has not been continued, and the season is now past when an offensive can be initiated with any prospect of important results. Russia may count on a tolerably secure prospect of being left for the winter with an opportunity for internal recuperation. That this recuperation, if it can be effected, will restore a high offensive value to the Russian Army in any short space of time is more than we can hope. Though the fighting spirit in the Army, as minor incidents at the front sometimes show, is not dead, its moral, its discipline, its cohesion are too seriously undermined to promise rapid recovery. Moreover, General Verkhovsky, the War Minister, has just admitted frankly that it is insufficiently equipped with food, fodder, and clothes for the winter campaign, and unless the disorganised condition of the factories improves, it is likely to find itself short of munitions. The economic condition of the country is incapable even of maintaining the Army at its present strength. In order to relieve the situation the Government proposes a partial demobilisation which, while it will reduce the effective strength at the front, will release men to assist in the reorganisation of internal services without which not only the military, but even the civil, functions of the country are menaced by complete paralysis. The ordered life of a community threatens to dissolve in chaos. That the soldiers have ceased to fight and the workmen to work is only the negative side of the picture. Law and order are in abeyance. Neither for the persons nor the property of private citizens is there efficient protection. Everywhere the rights of the educated classes are trampled underfoot by the baser elements of the proletariat. The ruin to which landed proprietors have been reduced by forcible dispossession would have some compensation if their lands had been kept in cultivation; but in wide areas they have not, and the danger of famine is urgent. "Anarchy," M Kerensky has just declared, "is growing irresistibly, and spreading in enormous waves through the whole State." The first condition of military recovery must be the arrest of this headlong movement not alone of the Army, but of the whole State, towards the abyss of anarchy.

Only a stable authority, based on the confidence of the people, and capable of framing and executing measures which can be carried out with the intelligent co-operation of the people, can avert disaster. Fortunately, there are signs that the process of disintegration has reached its period, and that a reaction towards political sanity is beginning to develop. The impetus in this direction has come from an unexpected source—the Democratic Conference now sitting at Petrograd. This body owes its origin indirectly to the Korniloff revolt. It will be remembered that, after the collapse of that movement, the Soviet, in the first flush of triumphant enthusiasm, passed an absurd resolution demanding that all the bourgeois parties, which it sought to implicate in the revolt, should be repudiated, and that all power should be vested in itself. Subsequently this resolution was rescinded, and a substitute was passed which, while giving a qualified and temporary support to the Government, summoned the Democratic Conference to determine the future form of government. The Democratic Conference, therefore, was designed to be a frankly sectional assembly, and it represented a protest against the policy of coalition maintained by the Provisional Government. Its subsequent development, however, has been widely different. In the first place, the Executive Committee entrusted with the actual convening of the Conference swamped the extremists by summoning representatives from the towns, the Zemstvos, and the co-operative organisations—the authentic instruments of democracy in action. In the result, therefore, the Conference assumed something of the character of a really representative and authoritative assembly. In the next place, the definitely revolutionary factions appear to have been sobered by the direct invitation to consider once more the responsibility which they must assume if they insist on bearing on their unaided shoulders the burden of the government of Russia. In any case M. Kerensky, in his speech before the Conference, was able to reassert his influence over an assembly large sections of which were at the outset openly hostile to his policy. As the sitting has continued, that policy has rapidly been finding favour on all sides. It proposes a Coalition Government responsible to an organisation elected or appointed by the Democratic Conference, and there appears to be little doubt that such a Government would attract general support with some hope of leading the country out of the impasse. Though the policy is not yet adopted, we may at least say that the nearer Russia drifts to the abyss of disaster, the more strongly are influences asserting themselves to save the State by a resolute sanity.

Bacon and Patriotism.

The character of all our meals has been affected by the increase of food prices, but of them all breakfast has been the chief sufferer. In regard to lunch, dinner, and supper the housewife has opportunities of modification and improvisation: they have a tradition of variety. The tradition of the ordinary English and Irish breakfast, however, is one of strict monotony. Dr. Johnson rejoiced in the varied abundance of the Scottish breakfast, and the Americans have adorned the morning meal with many inventions in the way of cereal foods; but in this matter most Englishmen and Irishmen are rigidly conservative. Bacon and eggs are still the sheet-anchor of the British breakfast-table. Fish and sausages are welcome visitors, but, without bacon and eggs, breakfast is no breakfast at all. Unfortunately, the prices of these two articles are among those that have scaled the giddiest heights during the last few months. Eggs are often unobtainable at any price, and bacon, as a regular part of the family dietary, now exceeds the limit of the average purse. We have bad news to-day for the good wife who, by stinting the household in other directions, has contrived hitherto to put a rasher on her husband's plate on at least three or four mornings in the week. The feat, which has grown more difficult with every day, is likely to become almost impossible in the immediate future. The Ministry of Food announces that, owing to unavoidable causes, the supply of bacon for the next two or three months will be much restricted. September, October, and November are the months in which reserves of bacon are normally at their lowest. Just now there are no supplies from Sweden and Holland; the supply from Denmark has been materially reduced; and in the United States a decline in the number of hogs has synchronised with an increase in the home demand for Army purposes. The British Government is doing its best to meet the situation, and hopes that it will "improve later." In the meanwhile, however, "the public will recognise (says the Ministry of Food) that a shortage of bacon supplies is inevitable, and can only be met by decreased consumption on the part of the civilian population." Canada has decided that—whatever else may go short—the troops must have their bacon, and has decreed "bacon-less days." In all eating places only one meal a day may include bacon, and on Tuesdays and Fridays the serving of bacon is entirely prohibited. Any breach of these regulations is punishable by fine or imprisonment. Similar measures are contemplated in the United States, but our own Food Controller shows no immediate intention of invoking the Defence of the Realm Act. He is content to put the facts plainly—even grimly—before the bacon-eating public. Here, as in Canada, it must be a case of "the soldier and sailor first." "Army requirements of bacon must have preference, and Lord Rhondda has agreed accordingly with the Army Council that they should maintain the supplies to the troops by requisitioning, if necessary, from the stocks ordinarily available for civilian consumption." Here is at once an appeal to patriotism and a clear warning to those who put the satisfaction of their own stomachs above the national need. We believe that the loyal people of these Islands will accept without a murmur Lord Rhondda's postulate that the fighting man must be well fed, even if civilians must break with the comfortable traditions of a life-time. No patriot will care to grumble when his wife invites him to "do his bit" by dispensing with bacon, so that the soldiers may have their rashers before they go "over the top." We should welcome, indeed, this new opportunity of showing our children that we are doing something in "the great war."

The Channel Tunnel.

At one time the Channel Tunnel between England and France was a dream, at another period an "unpatriotic suggestion," and always, in the earlier discussions, a topic of military controversy. The late Duke of Cambridge, when Commander-in-Chief, favoured it, but many Chiefs of Staff have regarded it as a renunciation of our insular independence. Sir Harry Johnston, who is accustomed to discuss world-wide questions, now writes strongly in support of a Channel tunnel—possibly as the joint work of the British and French Governments. He is of opinion that, if the tunnel had been in existence in 1914, Germany would not have attacked Belgium and France. She would have known that, within two or three days, we could have "poured two hundred thousand men into north-eastern France." That may not be a correct assumption, for the transport of the first Expeditionary Force could hardly have been accelerated. An army cannot move without its stores, and railways may be blocked with supplies. After this war our thoughts about a Channel tunnel will take a social and economic rather than a military turn. Travel must be facilitated, and opportunities must be given for free intercourse between friendly nations without the deterrent of the "Channel crossing." We may run the newest types of turbine steamers, thereby cutting down the crossing to a matter of minutes, but for bad sailors the ordeal will always remain. Many attempts have been made with specially constructed ships to abolish seasickness, but none has succeeded. France and England settled all outstanding differences long ago, and the bond of alliance, so far as human intelligence can foresee, is likely to prove indissoluble. It is not too much to anticipate that, even under pre-war conditions, the volume of traffic between the two countries will be increased three-fold. With a tunnel the increase might be ten-fold—not all to Paris, but through France as a highway to the Mediterranean and the East. We may live to see the Garden of Eden a fashionable winter resort for the people who, before the war, limited their wanderings to the Riviera and Egypt.

COUNTY OF DUBLIN JURORS' LISTS.

The revision of the above lists was opened yesterday at the Town Hall, Rathmines, before Mr. William Lawson, the Revising Barrister. Mr. R. T. Blackburne, Secretary, Dublin County Council, and Mr. Seacome Mason, Town Clerk, Rathmines, were in attendance. Mr. Harford Kelly represented the Dublin Jurors' Association.

Mr. George Fottrell, Clerk of the Crown and Peace, attended and read a memorandum indicating how he had dealt with jurors' summonses returned through the post-office, marked "dead," "left," and the steps he had taken by him to facilitate the revision. In a number of cases he found that, although the summonses were marked as indicated, the Clerks of the Unions had returned the names of the persons to whom the summonses were addressed as alive and well, and other steps taken by him to facilitate the revision. THE IRISH REBELLION.

RAILWAY COMPANIES CLAIM COMPENSATION.

The War Losses Commission sat yesterday to hear claims in the matter of principle arising out of the Irish rebellion from the Midland Railway Company, the Great Southern and Western Railway Company, the Dublin and South-Eastern Railway Company, and the Belfast and County Down Railway Company. Mr. Vesey Knox, K.C., appeared for the applicants, and Mr. Shortt-General (Sir Gordon Stewart, K.C.), Mr. Carrington, K.C., and Mr. Branson appeared for the Crown.

Mr. Knox said—In the case of the railways were only physically affected by the rebellion, except the Midland and South-Eastern. There was a great rising in Enniscorthy, whilst other places were captured by the rebels. With those exceptions there was nothing to prevent the proper working of the railways if the military had not taken them over. On various dates, principally in and out of Dublin was practically in a state of siege, and communication was disorganised by the rebellion. The Great Southern Railway system was the only line to be held at the disposal of the military. Dublin in and out of Dublin was practically the railway transport of Ireland, and all connected with it. It was the principal railway system in the country, and was quite reasonable that it should be held at the disposal of the military authorities. The companies did not complain of the military taking over the control of the railways, but that reasonable compensation should be given. All other traffic was subject to the most proper precautions except that of passengers.

Mr. F. Keogh, General Manager of the Great Southern Railways, said he would prepare an amended claim showing the loss and interference if the Commission thought it had received any substantial damage to property or business, and for trains specially required.

Mr. T. Harris, Traffic Manager of the same railway, gave evidence as to the effect of the military taking possession of the Dublin and Kingstown line. Mr. Elliott said the business life was practically at a standstill during the rebellion as scarcely a single train was allowed to run. The people would have been starved but for the trains had been put in.

Mr. Elliott, of the Dublin and South-Eastern Railway, in the thick of business of the rebellion on behalf of the railway company, and claimed £1,000 for damage to property and £1,000 for loss of business.

The Commission then adjourned.

HARVEST FIRST-FRUITS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—In reference to the admirable suggestion in to-day's issue of the Irish Times, that we should give a "first-fruits" offering to your Red Cross Fund, I ask: "Why not?" In response to plot-holders, I have already given a subscription, but "P. R. S." makes me feel that we farmers will not be the last to help Heaven help us in this direful upset. Considering the glorious harvest the past month has given us, as a nation, I honour the label with the Shamrock on our increase." I, therefore, enclose one for £2/2/—Yours, etc.,

A GRATEFUL FARMER.'

October 1st, 1917.

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

THE PRESENT FIGHTING.

It is plain, says The Times, that the Passchendaele-Ridge and the last portion of the Gheluvelt Ridge are going to be won only by very hard fighting. The public at home should never forget for a moment that upon the slopes of these ultimate ridges our troops are engaged in the hottest and the most desperate battle of the year. This issue still hangs in the balance, and the most determined and continuous efforts will be required if our immediate objectives are to be gained. The fine weather, which gives the enemy a chance to raid these islands, is of great value to our forces on the Ypres front, although sometimes suspected that the enemy mean to yield up their control of the Belgian coast, and are only trying to gain time for the completion of a new and shorter line somewhere behind back. No credence should be given to these pleasing suggestions. Eight powerful counter-attacks in a week, chiefly made with fresh troops, have a much bigger purpose than gaining time. To the German the retention of the right of their line on the Western front is a matter of life or death. On the day that they quit it their line will be cut in two, and from this they are well aware. The battle of Menin Road should be the prelude to greater events.

THE ANSWER TO AIR RAIDS.

In a letter to The Times, Professor Spenser Wilkinson writes to-day:—Is not the right way to stop air raids on London to destroy the German aerodromes in Belgium, a plan which has lately been put in practice? If that is done the British aerodromes sent to France will be better still for our defence, for the destruction of the enemy's squadrons can be accomplished only by concentrated attacks in great force upon them. To make air raids on London less can have no military purpose, but could divert forces from their proper objective—the enemy's air forces.

Sir Rowly Morris writes:—What we feel is that our Ministers ought long ago to have provided sufficient air machines and airmen to prevent the invasion of Germany, without having to consider what the requirements for other offensive and defensive purposes. The importance of breaking the German moral was never greater than now, when Von Kuhlmann is nearing the Germans of their strength and internal security, and the rest of the world that the unity of the German people, German Parliament, and German rulers on questions of high policy, is complete, and that "a united Germany can never be beaten." Time will show the falsity of all this, if only we will raid Germany extensively and incessantly whilst hostilities continue.

A HAPPY PRUSSIAN HOLIDAY.

The Vossische Zeitung, says The Times, publishes an illuminating sketch of the holiday life in a Silesian summer hotel. The guests come down to breakfast, which consists of "a thin cup of native tea with saccharine, and two slices of indescribable war bread, smeared with a small quantity of cultivated stuff which is said to have the name of marmalade. Enter the waiter "beautiful and elegant women," followed by a lady's maid bearing a large cake, two magazines and two boiled eggs for each of the party, and then a quite real and actual pound of butter." There are mutterings of "food tags," and angry discoveries that nothing else is brought its own food from a neighbouring country house. An elderly Prussian official brings his fist upon the table, and says "Go and fetch the police. They are eating three times their weekly ration. You are thieves who are feeding on what belongs to the State, and eating up our butter and our meat."

A young Prussian officer pushes away his plate, and says loudly, "Ill-mannered crew. Not a trace of taste or upbringing. If they had the slightest idea of good manners, they would not have their food served in this room." At last the indignant spectators leave the room and nothing inside them but a sense of bitter tears and good upbringing."

DENMARK'S DIFFICULTIES.

In an article to-day the Copenhagen Correspondent of The Times indicates that the rejection of imports in Denmark has caused the Danes, though still pro-Entente, to be more reserved and less actively sympathetic than they were at the beginning of the war. A solid block of the public still so decidedly sympathise with the Entente that they will never waver in attitude, the responsibility for inflations to Germany, but the effect of the war is evidence in the paint on the faces in the street, who feels the pinch of the dearth, can easily be made to believe that, at any rate, part of his misfortunes are due to the Entente's blockade. Eventually, Denmark cannot be actually starved. Conditions there are decidedly better than in Sweden. The stopping of imports of feeding stuffs, however, will necessarily reduce, and has, in fact, resulted in a wholesale killing of the stock, which means the destruction on a large scale of the real capital of Danish agriculture.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Stock markets, says The Times, were fairly firm in consequence, but business was on a restricted scale. The gilt-edged markets are steadier, and Argentine Railway Stocks continued to harden. Rubber Shares were supported, and also our Eastern Rand Shares and the Industrial Securities, which have lost ground of late. The only weak feature was a heavy fall on Trunk Railway Securities on the passing of the interim dividend.

ISSUE OF NATIONAL WAR BONDS.

£5 per Cent. Bonds, repayable 1st October, 1922, at 102 per Cent.

£5 per Cent. Bonds, repayable 1st October, 1924, at 103 per Cent.

£5 per Cent. Bonds, repayable 1st October, 1927, at 105 per Cent.

AND

£4 per Cent. Bonds, repayable 1st October, 1927 ("Income Tax Compounded") at 100 per Cent.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY ON THE 1st APRIL AND 1st OCTOBER.

FIRST DIVIDEND PAYABLE 1st APRIL, 1918.

PRICE OF ISSUE, £100 PER CENT.

PAYABLE ON APPLICATION.

The Governor and Company of the Bank of England are authorised by the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury to receive, on the 2nd October, 1917, and thereafter until further notice, applications for the above Bonds. Applications may be lodged at any office of the Banks hereafter mentioned.

The principal and interest of the Bonds are chargeable on the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom.

Bonds of this issue, and the interest payable from time to time in respect thereof, will be exempt from all British taxation, present or future, if it is shown in the manner directed by the Treasury, that they are in the beneficial ownership of a person who is neither domiciled nor ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

Further, the interest payable from time to time in respect of £5 per cent. Bonds of this issue will be exempt from British income tax, present or future, if it is shown, in the manner directed by the Treasury, that the Bonds are in the beneficial ownership of a person who is not ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, without the exemption under their provisions, the relative coupons will be paid without deduction for income or other taxes, if accompanied by a declaration of ownership in such form as may be required by the Treasury.

Interest on the £4 per cent. Bonds will be exempt from liability to assessment to British income tax other than super-tax. For the purposes of super-tax, and in computing the total income for the purposes of exemption, abatement, reduced rate of income tax on earned or unearned income, etc., the income derived from such interest will be treated as if the amount represented the net income after deduction of income tax at the full normal rate. There will, however, be no title to repayment of income tax in respect of such untaxed interest.

Bonds of this issue will be accepted at their nominal value in due allowance for any unpaid interest thereon by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, in satisfaction of amounts due on account of duties, excess profits duty, or munitions exchequer payments, included in the case of death duties, that such Bonds have formed part of the estate of the deceased continuously up to the date of death from the date of the original subscription, for a period of not less than six months immediately preceding the date of death, and, in the case of excess profits duty or munitions exchequer payments, that they have been held continuously by the firm, company, or other person liable for such duty or payment since the date of the original subscription, or for a period of not less than six months before such duty and payment becomes due and payable.

Holders of £5 per cent. Bonds of this issue may convert their holdings within fourteen days after any half-yearly interest date (viz., 1st April and 1st October), and as on such interest date up to the date of death from the date of the original subscription, for a period of not less than six months immediately preceding the date of death, and, in the case of excess profits duty or munitions exchequer payments, that they have been held continuously by the firm, company, or other person liable for such duty or payment since the date of the original subscription, or for a period of not less than six months before such duty and payment becomes due and payable.

Holders of £5 per cent. Bonds of this issue may convert their holdings within fourteen days after any half-yearly interest date (viz., 1st April and 1st October), and as on such interest date up to the date of death from the date of the original subscription, for a period of not less than six months immediately preceding the date of death, and, in the case of excess profits duty or munitions exchequer payments, that they have been held continuously by the firm, company, or other person liable for such duty or payment since the date of the original subscription, or for a period of not less than six months before such duty and payment becomes due and payable.

The first dividend on a holding of £5 per Cent. War Loan, 1929-1947, or of £4 per Cent. War Loan, 1929-1942, issued in lieu of National War Bonds converted will represent interest from the date of conversion to the next succeeding interest date of the Loan into which the Bonds have been converted.

In the event of future issues (other than issues made abroad or issues of Exchequer Bonds, Treasury Bills, or similar short-dated securities) being made by His Majesty's Government for the purpose of carrying on the war, Bonds of this issue will be accepted at par as the equivalent of cash for the purposes of subscriptions to such issues, and an allowance will be made for any interest accrued on Bonds so accepted.

The Bonds will be issued in denominations of £50, £100, £200, £500, £1,000, and £5,000, and the interest thereon will be payable half-yearly by coupon, the first coupon on each Bond representing interest from the date on which application, lodged and payment made for the Bond at any office of one of the Banks hereafter mentioned.

Bonds of this issue may be registered, free of cost, in the books of the Bank of England, or of the Bank of Ireland, as—

1. "Transferable in the Bank Transfer Books," or

2. "Transferable by deed."

Allotments may be obtained in registered form, or in Bonds to bearer, at the option of the applicant.

Holdings of Registered Bonds, which will be transferable in any sums which are multiples of a hundred pounds, may be re-converted at any time, in whole or in part (in multiples of £50), into Bonds to bearer, with coupons attached.

Dividends on Registered £5 per Cent. Bonds of this issue will be paid without deduction of income tax, but the income derived from such dividends will be assessable to income tax in the hands of the recipients at the rates of tax appropriate to their respective incomes. Dividend warrants will be transmitted by post.

Applications for Bonds, which must in every case be accompanied by payment of the full amount payable in respect of the Bonds applied for, may be lodged at any office of the following Banks at any time at which such offices are open for business, viz.:—

DUBLIN STOCK EXCHANGE.

BANK STOCK LOWER. GUINNESS WANTED. TEXTILES DULL.

DUBLIN, TUESDAY EVENING.

There was nothing in the nature of business briskness on Change to-day, and prices, which moved irregularly, were pretty evenly balanced. The Funds were not affected by the new War Bond issue notified. Bank Stock gave way further. Breweries and Distilleries tended upwards. Guinness Ord. were very firm at the close on the increased output notified for brewers. Parent Tyre Def. were firm; otherwise Dunlop issues were easy in tone. Textiles were rather on offer without being weak.
